

Docebo Releases its LMS Joomla “Open Source” Integration Plug-In

Joomla CMS users are now able to transform their website into an E-Learning portal thanks to the Docebo's Joomla LMS integration plug-in.

Naples, May 23, 2013 – Docebo, www.docebo.com a global E-Learning solutions provider released the Joomla “open source” integration plug-in for the Docebo E-Learning platform.

The application allows organizations around the globe to transform their Joomla websites into a next generation E-Learning portal by interfacing the Docebo E-Learning platform with any Joomla enabled website.

Furthermore, the integration plug-in will allow Joomla site owners to import their CMS users into the Docebo Learning Management System. Docebo has also enable a Joomla widget that shows users the courses they are enrolled in within the Docebo platform.

As one of the first companies that is able to offer a comprehensive E-Learning Ecosystem, Docebo is moving from a “product” to a “service” approach, the next big thing that will become an industry standard within the next couple of years.

Docebo's free Joomla integration plug-in can be added in the Joomla administration area, or it can be downloaded from the Docebo.com website.

Executive Quote:

“Docebo is globally disrupting the E-Learning market, by consistently innovating its product offerings with new releases such as the unique Docebo App Marketplace” says Claudio Erba - CEO & Founder of Docebo. “We have released this Joomla plug-in under the Open Source license because we believe in Joomla developers contribution to the Open community, and we want to give them the opportunity to work on this plug-in to help us improving the Docebo E-Learning experience by a Joomla user standpoint”.

Docebo is already moving from a “product” to a “service” approach, and is one of the first companies that is able to offer a comprehensive E-Learning Ecosystem, the next big thing that will become an Industry standard within the next couple of years.
